Our Mission
Together we create opportunities that change lives.

Carter, a 2017 participant in our Utah Peer Connections program, learned on-the-job social and communication skills while volunteering at the Thanksgiving Point Museum of Ancient Life.

Our Vision
We envision a world where everyone has access to the care, skills and support they need, regardless of their resources.

Our Values
Integrity  Excellence  Innovation
Message from the President and CEO

Promoting independence is the common thread that runs through all of the varied services Easter Seals-Goodwill provides. You’ll see in the pages that follow, three very different and meaningful examples of how independence is being realized in the lives of people we serve.

Our organization was privileged to support more than 7,300 individuals in their pursuit of greater independence in 2017. Though recovering from the impact of reduced funding for our Wyoming services, and the 2016 loss of a major statewide contract in Idaho, the organization continued to make progress in program development and mission fulfillment.

Workforce Development and Clinical Services are two program areas in which growth potential was identified in our five-year strategic plan, and we made strides toward growing both areas this past year. Workforce development staff began providing job skills development and employment services to public assistance recipients as a subcontractor with the Human Resource Development Council (HRDC) in Billings, Montana.

In Idaho, workforce development and Goodwill® retail staff collaborated during the final year of the Careers in Retail (CiR) grant through Goodwill Industries International (GII) and Walmart Foundation. We exceeded our goals on this grant and were cited multiple times as an example for retail and program collaboration by GII.

We applied to expand our Butte, Montana, hospice program to serve patients in Great Falls and were notified in December 2017 that the application was approved. Clinical Services staff plan to start accepting patients in late spring of 2018.

Our retail operations continued to grow in 2017, contributing needed income to support Easter Seals-

Goodwill programs. We opened our 17th retail store in Billings Heights, Montana, in August 2017.

In 2017 we were fortunate to receive several generous financial gifts, including two significant bequests. The generosity of loyal Goodwill shoppers, who rounded up their purchases during 2017, also made an impact, enabling the organization to overcome funding gaps in several program areas. To these and all of our donors, community supporters, friends and staff, thank you, for your commitment to Easter Seals-Goodwill and the people we serve!

Warm regards,

Michelle Belknap
Meet Porter

Porter came to our Provo, Utah, Early Intervention program when he was seven months old. Born at just 23 weeks gestation, he had spent the prior six months in the neo-natal intensive care unit. Because of his early arrival, Porter faced significant developmental delays and serious health challenges. Porter had a tracheostomy tube in place, was fed through a tube to his stomach and was also dependent on a ventilator to help him breathe.

Porter’s medical needs and equipment made moving, playing and getting others to interact with him a challenge. Our early intervention staff spent many hours with Porter and his family, brainstorming ways to help promote his developmental skills. As he grew, staff focused on supporting Porter’s parents, helping them find ways to help Porter learn to interact with others, explore his environment, begin moving and communicating independently, and also eat and drink.

Porter experienced many medical setbacks during his time in early intervention: hospitalizations, medical procedures and many illnesses. Each time he became sick or needed another procedure, Porter would need time to heal and regain his strength before getting back to intervention.

Porter’s parents were very in tune with his limitations and needs and were able to work with the early intervention team to continue to provide support to Porter, even when he wasn’t strong enough to participate fully in his therapy.

In spite of these challenges and setbacks, Porter has shown wonderful progress. When he “graduated” from our services at 34 months, Porter was walking and climbing by himself, pointing and using some signs and words. He loves food and enjoys eating with his family.

Porter is now a very curious boy who loves to explore. He loves to tease his parents by getting their attention and then doing something he normally isn’t supposed to do (like unplugging electronics). He is affectionate and social and his cognitive skills are no longer delayed. He is beginning to use his voice more and is learning new words. For the most part, Porter looks and acts like a typical toddler.

Below: Porter playing with a car, and posing next to a photo of himself as a newborn in the NICU.
Porter is a strong, happy boy who has wonderfully dedicated and loving parents. Even though he had a rough start, Porter has grown and learned so much, it’s hard to believe that he was ever behind with his development.

Provo Early Intervention program provides individualized developmental, therapeutic and educational services that support every child’s potential, and empower children, families and caregivers.

2017 by the Numbers

3,098 people received job training and employment services in our Idaho and Montana workforce development programs, our Senior Community Service Employment Program (SCSEP) in Utah, and in our Goodwill stores.

1,997 people received therapy and other health-related services in our home care, hospice and personal care services in Montana; our behavioral health program in Idaho; and in our early intervention services in Utah.

14,903 lives touched by Easter Seals-Goodwill in our four states through participation in our services, educational or informational outreach, and volunteer opportunities.

183 people with disabilities were able to live more independently in our community integration, supported living, and residential services for adults with intellectual disabilities in Great Falls, Montana and Sheridan, Wyoming.

682 people received counseling and substance abuse treatment in our behavioral health services located in Boise, Caldwell and Mountain Home, Idaho.

1,002 people employed by Easter Seals-Goodwill in our four states in 41 different programs and 42 locations across our four-state region.

682 people received counseling and substance abuse treatment in our behavioral health services located in Boise, Caldwell and Mountain Home, Idaho.

Adults with disabilities in our community integration services in Great Falls, Montana, tested the waters of the Missouri river on a float trip last summer.
Meet Jan

In 2016 Jan found herself unemployed and dealing with significant health issues. She needed to position herself for employment in a job that could meet her financial needs.

Jan came to our Careers in Retail program in Boise, Idaho, where she received training and mentoring to help advance her existing job skills. Through completing classes such as business communication, teamwork, professionalism and problem solving, Jan gained new insights and confidence in her abilities, along with improved leadership and interpersonal skills.

The Careers in Retail program was created to give unemployed and underemployed individuals a competitive edge in the retail arena. By learning leadership and communication skills highly desired by employers, our program graduates can differentiate themselves from other job seekers and potentially qualify for higher-paying, mid-level positions.

After graduating from Careers in Retail, Jan landed a job with a fabrics and crafts store in Boise, where she continued to receive support and encouragement from our staff. Jan applied the skills she'd learned, worked hard and was promoted to a supervisor position as a framing manager at the store.

When asked what she learned in Careers in Retail that has helped her most at work, Jan said it’s the importance of appreciating her coworkers and teammates and embracing everyone’s personality and work styles to get the job done.

“I learned how to respond better to co-workers and appreciate how each of us is different,” she said. This seemingly small thing has helped Jan be more productive and enjoy her work environment more than she ever has before. “I draw on what I learned in class many times during the work week,” said Jan.

Jan also learned how to better balance work and personal life. After her years-long struggle with a chronic health issue, our Careers in Retail program helped Jan be aware of how she’s feeling each day. She learned how to better manage her health needs without compromising her job.

The Careers in Retail program was funded through a grant that ended in 2016. We continue to offer this series of Leadership Training classes to private businesses and other employment providers in the Boise and Twin Falls area as part of our Idaho Workforce Development services.
Meet Cindy

It’s tough to say which has had the greater impact: our services on Cindy’s life, or Cindy’s life on our organization. The joy and challenge of supporting Cindy’s quest for independence and personal fulfillment for nearly two decades have impacted how we support every person who enters our services.

Cindy was one of the first people in Easter Seals Wyoming’s day services, and the first to enter our residential program. She and two roommates moved into a cozy cottage they named Sunbonnet house in 2001.

A brittle, insulin-dependent diabetic, Cindy also has a dual diagnosis of Down syndrome and profound intellectual disabilities. While she initially tried living in a group home, her medical challenges demanded a personalized style of attention other programs could not meet. Thankfully, Cindy has an incredibly supportive family. Cindy’s mom Willa helped daily in directing Cindy’s transition to Sunbonnet home and has continued to be a strong support and resource.

The changes in Cindy after entering our Sunbonnet house were dramatic. When she arrived, she was non-verbal and non-social. Within a short time though she began speaking, and as her vocabulary increased, her sassy sense of humor emerged. Cindy has a wonderful sarcastic wit and a beautiful belly laugh.

Staff would ask, “Cindy, are you ready for the nurse to see you?” and she’d reply, “Kiss my grits!” followed by a lengthy laugh.

Cindy’s sense of style is quite regal. Her accumulation of jewelry is legendary among our staff. Every morning she would carefully select rings, broaches, bracelets, and even tiaras from her collection to adorn herself for the day. When a staff member once told her, “Cindy, Elizabeth Taylor couldn’t even carry your lunchbox,” Cindy smiled coyly, cuddled her chin against her shoulder and replied, “I know.”

During her years with Easter Seals Wyoming, Cindy has endeared herself not only to our staff, but the larger community as well. She stole the show year after year in our annual community play, with her natural gift for acting and a wicked sense of comedic timing. She also sang and played chimes and a tambourine in many Christmas concerts.

At this point in Cindy’s life (she is nearing 60), her medical complications have created severe risks to her health. A lifetime of diabetes has taken a toll. Crippling arthritis and serious respiratory issues add to her difficulties. Staff is grateful for the privilege and opportunity to continue to support and encourage her.

Presently, Cindy spends much more time away from Sunbonnet and Easter Seals’ daytime Community Integration services. She is mostly staying at home with her mother, Willa, and her dad, Bob. In her own quiet way, she is bravely showing us all how to gracefully and enjoyably live above adversity.

Cindy and mom, Willa, spending some time together in Cindy’s bedroom at the Sunbonnet house.
In her quiet and endearing way, Cindy has blazed a wide trail through what others might call insurmountable limitations to enjoy a full and meaningful life.

_Easter Seals Wyoming provides individualized services that support adults living with intellectual and developmental disabilities, so they can live their most, meaningful, productive, and independent lives._

Goodwill® Retail

Our Goodwill stores continued to provide high-quality and affordable shopping options for customers in Montana, southern Idaho and Utah this year, while generating over 50% of the organization’s revenue. More than 1.83 million shoppers visited our retail stores in 2017. And, 44% of those shoppers who made a purchase rounded up to the next dollar, providing an additional $233,533 to help fund Easter Seals-Goodwill’s services.

We opened a new Montana location in Billings Heights and a new store in Twin Falls, Idaho, in 2017. A 10,000 square-foot Goodwill Outlet store in Salt Lake City is slated to open in 2018. Our retail operations are on track to reach our goal of 25 total stores by the end of fiscal year 2020.

Goodwill’s Impact

- 2,191 people received job training and work experience
- 564 people were employed in our retail operations
- 8.3 million pounds of goods were recycled and kept from landfills
